Take on Big Bucks in Canada without pulling Big Bucks out of your pocket in an area with an outfitter that has Good Bucks and good Bears with an extremely high success rate.

This outfitter shows honesty even with a written guarantee that few will offer.

If a client does not see a bear or whitetail on his or her hunt they can come back the following year for the cost of the License. All of this from an outfitter with whitetail and black bear record book animals under his belt.

Average Whitetails in both areas are 130 - 140 class with the largest Whitetail taken 199 B/C with Steve Esposito from Hallstead, Pennsylvania in our Manitoba Area, the World's first Typical 8x8 taken in Saskatchewan with Joe Lurch from Wall, N.J.

Average Bears taken in both areas are 200-250 pound in the Spring, our camp holds the Saskatchewan Record of 737 pounds in the Spring with Bill Pace from Canton, IL.

We are always looking for new areas of opportunity. Here are several trail cam photos of 400 pound plus bears in our Manitoba Fall bear hunting area. This area opened up only 6 years ago with only 6 tags.

TYPICAL SIZES OF TROPHIES TAKEN:

SUCCESS RATIO BY:

ANIMAL SPECIE	OPPORTUNITY%	KILL RATIO %
Saskatchewan Whitetail	100 % (sightings)	90 % on 130-140 class bucks
Manitoba Whitetail Outcamp	100 % (sightings)	80 % on 130 class bucks
Saskatchewan Spring Bear	100 % (sightings)	90 % on 200lbs. plus bears
Manitoba Spring Bear	100 % (sightings)	90 % on 200 lbs. plus bears
Manitoba Fall Bear	100 % (sightings)	90% on 250 lbs. plus bears
Manitoba Interlake Whitetail	100% (sightings)	80% on 130 class buck

The kill ratios for all whitetail hunting areas depend on these key items:

(1) If rut is in place for the week your hunt is booked. Rut varies from year to year.

(2) How alert, observant & quiet you are in your treestand

(3) Weather patterns (have no control over the weather)

(4) Caliber of hunter; some hunters will not kill any whitetail which scores under 170 B/C because we have so many big bucks. Sometimes they wait and pass up a big one that didn't quite make 170 but was still a very large buck by anyone's standards. I do not condemn these people for what they are doing I just want to be open to new incoming hunters that the success ratio can be squid by their passing of real good bucks. In these cases the opportunity is 100% weather they shoot is up to the choice of the hunter.

The kill ratios for all bear hunting areas are a factor of:

(1) How alert, observant and quiet you are in your treestand

(2) Weather patterns (we admit we have no control over weather)

(3) Caliber of hunter; some hunters won't kill any bear they feel isn't around 400lbs, because we have so many big bears. Sometimes they wait and pass up a big one that didn't quite make 170 but was still a very large buck by anyone's standards. I do not condemn these people for what they are doing I just want to be open to new incoming hunters that the success ratio can be squid by their passing of real good bears. In these cases the opportunity is 100% weather they shoot is up to the choice of the hunter.

We carefully scout these areas and bait accordingly. Because of the weather and other factors the local bear or deer may not show every day. Except in unique circumstances we provide unused stands for every hunter, when he has hunted it, filled or not, I don't use that bait site again until next year. Because of this our hunters stay in the same tree stand unless I see something unique that warrants a change of stands. Years of experience and successful hunters has provided me with good judgment on changing stands and provided successful hunters during the past years.

I put my deer hunters in areas that hold 150B/C bucks but I cannot guarantee that the whitetail will surface the week that he or she is booked. I know these areas from history, guide scouting, my scouting and trail cams or from previous hunters sightings where they passed on a 150 hoping for a 170 that didn't show during their stay.

As a standard in Canada you will have 6 days of actual hunting, arrives on Sunday and leave on Saturday night.

Bring an Orange Jacket & Orange Hat, your Sleeping Bag, Thermos, Towels, Shampoo and personal items and you should be ready for a great successful hunt as others before you have..
