Great price on a Trophy Mule Deer Hunt and if you didn't draw the outfitter will eat all but $ 150 of the $2000 Landowner voucher so you can get a license. There are only two available so you snooze you lose.

This can be a Low Impact High Success Trophy Deer Hunt on private land. It can be a mountain Cabin horseback for trophy elk with very, very many over 300 inch taken with last year bringing home a 365 bull. The trophy elk are up at 11,500 feet, the deer although there are some between the cabin and the elk they are not as plentiful in large sizes as they are down on the much lower private ground. With that said, you can have a low land trophy deer hunt. Or a high country elk only hunt, or a high country deer and elk hunt. Each is only $ 3995. If you need a voucher to get a deer license for all but $150 of it is included in your deer hunt for as long as the vouchers last.

If you ever remember anything in life remember this, “An outfitter is only as good as his ground he hunts.” He can’t make elk, he can just find them. The more times he finds them during a hunt the more you can say he is a good outfitter... or damn lucky!

This outfitter is just plain good and has built his success on his ability on his ability to provide shot opportunities to his hunter at a range close enough that the shot is also a success, not just shot opportunity.

He says there is some luck of course but 20 plus years of outfitting with hunting before that in a good area (GMU077 GMU078 GMU711) doesn’t hurt a bit. If you were walking it you would say that those three units are larger than the state of Texas, but his horses make short work of it.

His ability to move and go where the elk are is another key point in his success. Elk are always a moving target. The elk herds are like a caravan of gypsies, they have their core area like the deer but they have no problem leaving one core area and the new core may be on the other side of a mountain 5 miles away.

His cabin, his horses and trailers are a big part of his mobility to be able quickly pick up stakes liken the elk and go to a different neighborhood.

Some call it “Plan B”, he just call it elk hunting.

His guides are worth bragging on. Every last one is an archer during their free time. A successful archer knows elk inside and out, it shows in his success when the hunt is done.

I though the first line above was the most important but I lied, this last one is. The ability of an outfitter to have all these wheels in place and to have them work like a well-oiled wheel buy only leading, the wheels know their responsibility, skill and part of the whole picture called success

Now is the part known as, “If you ever remember anything in life remember this!”

Because even if his ground isn’t good he can quickly pickup and move onto ground that is. In this case private ground or high altitude ground which is ever more prosperous at the time.

I have just introduced you to this outfitter. His deer hunts are no failure either. Producing vouchers for deer hunters and taking 150-190 bucks on a regular basis is good but his 165 inch bull with others close behind tells me that this is the outfitter that I want to stake my hard earned money with. In most of this it is dependent on how long or how well the client can keep his finger off the trigger.

His hunt prices are simple. Come hunt elk with him which you will always have to work previously booked hunters to get a spot and you will understand after seeing what you read above was all about, high success with large Colorado Bulls hitting the dirt.

His family and skilled purists make up the team that control you week of hunt and are highly responsible for the outcome. Highly, but not completely because you have to make one shot true and accurate, they do everything else.

2001 He has been approved by the North American Hunting Club for his skills as an outfitter. With that he provides fully guided archery, black powder, and rifle hunts on private land and the San Juan National Forest. He does spread his skill around by providing Drop camps to DIY hunters in these prime units. All guided hunts include first-class lodging, meals, and experienced guides.

His hunts include the pursuit of Elk, Black Bear, Mule Deer and Merriam Turkey, guided or drop camp depending on the hunters desires.

There is no off season during the summer he offer drop camps and Summer pack and high country fishing trips along with straight horse leasing to those that aren't equine or should I say Cowboy challenged.

Weather: You can expect in the in the early seasons slightly freezing temperatures at night with midday fair and warmer. The possibility of snow or rain always exists. As the season progresses, temperatures 10° to 20° below zero at night are likely with snow and the need of a heavy jacket even in midday. However, the reverse can be the case in either season. One rule to remember the worse the weather the better the hunting because the animals are required to move and provide shots that in blue bird weather would not happen making them more vulnerable to shot.
