Vancouver Bull

Kona, Island of Hawai'i

Price Per Person: $1950.00

Season Opens: Year Round

Vancouver Bulls arrived to Hawaii in 1778 as a gift to king Kamehameha from captain George Vancouver. A kapu (restriction) was put on hunting Vancouver bulls for nearly forty years and by the 1820's the population of wild cattle thrived. Hunting wild cattle became an important source of beef for whaling ships arriving to Hawaii that later sparked Hawaii's historic ranching industry. Many of Hawaii's old time paniolo (cowboys) tell hairy tales of close encounters with mad bulls. Vancouver bull hunting is not for the faint of heart as a startled or wounded 1,000 pound bull is dangerous. Hawaii safaris offers free range bull hunting on Fourteen thousand acre McCandless ranch which is home to an estimated three hundred free range wild cattle that are descendants of Hawaii's original Vancouver bull. A trophy fee of $550 applies to bulls with a combined horn length of thirty inches.
