New Mexico Mule deer hunt. Make yourself at home while you hunt 38 sections or 26,000 acres in search of the buck that you want in unit 37. This hunt is a guided hunt with meals and lodging. The lodging will be in wall tents, unless the bunk houses are open, then you will stay in there. In New Mexico the Mule Deer is the king of this ranch. The ranch only takes a total of about 3 hunters per year so you will never see another hunter unless you ate breakfast with him.

It is a 5 day season in October and the New Mexico heat is turning down slowly leaving the area around Fort Stockton very enjoyable to be out in enjoying what you enjoy best, hunting the Mule Deer. If you have ever hunted in the middle of nowhere than you have returned to hunt it again when you arrive at this huge sprawling ranch.

The deer herd is in mixed habitat and terrain depending on rain available water sources and the season of course. Most of the hunting is drive, park on a high spot and glass looking for antlers or the silhouette of a back of the deer making a horizontal line in an otherwise vertical line world of mesquite, sage and other low lever brush.

Once a buck is spotted it is time to take out the spotting scope, turn up the amplification and see what the buck scores on the hoof. Your guide is very seasoned and is able to provide you a very accurate estimate of what your buck is going to score. When he meets your needs then the stalk takes part as you slowly slip out of the truck staying low and out of view. With your guide leading the way through the thick mesquite to an area that you decided would be within range with a view of your buck, you look for a place you can stay low, get a clear shot. As you can see you make the call, stalk or pass at that point until you wrap your license around a good one.

At night it is tent camp with the southern New Mexico Weather a treat to have wrapped around you. If available there are bunk houses but availability is a random issue so plan on tent with cots type lodging and meals to keep you going each day.

This property has never been hunted commercially which provides a wild mystery in the size of the bucks that occupy it and call it home. On a personal basis a 140-160 inch buck is very realistic. To say that is as big as they get on 23,000 acres in the middle of nowhere would be a lie on my part and I don't want to go there. To improve your odds do your part so that when the guide does his and says he is too far out I can get a score on him but he is huge, be able to make the shot at that distance work, that part is your responsibility, the guide has two things he can't do, 1 is pull the trigger for you and the other is to do your call to nature for you.

The ability to keep constant quality animals that allow us to provide a consistent average size base is possible due to game management. We take no more than 4 total deer off the property per year and usually it is just 3 hunts, and 3 animals.

The hunts are geared toward a Low Impact hunt with no to minimal steep climbing and the majority of the time it consists of driving and glassing from in and outside the 4 wheel drive vehicle. The time of the day dictates the locations where we spend our time during the mornings, mid-days and Evenings. Food, water and bedding areas are the key spots that we monitor the area for bucks each day.

The hunts take place in October for a 5 day span. They are priced at $6000 but have been reduced down $2100 to only $3995 for this year only. One of the 3 slots has been quickly filled leaving the opportunity of a single hunter or two buddies hunting together to take the last two of the seats.
