If there was ever a good place to hunt, this is it. You will be traveling through a big private ranch which blocks access to the National Forest property behind it. When you are in the national forest you will see that one side is blocked by a large cliff, and the other side a 15 mile walk through a designated wilderness area without roads and no motorized vehicle access.

Add to that a low cost Drop Camp for 4-6 hunters in a group and you have been put right in the middle of premium elk country with you buddies. Add to this the option that doubles you success rate. The advantage of being able to hire and guide that has hunted the area for years, where the elk are, and where the elk aren't. This assistance is only $400 per day total all hunters for 1, 2, 3 days combined or if you like.

Since you are about 5 miles back in back packing your elk out on your back or paying an outfitter to pack it out for $ 500 isn't going to happen. Basically, shoot and gut your elk. Get it to a place where and horse can get to it and you have done your part of packing out the elk. The wrangler will pack it out so you can stay with your buddies. The success rate runs between 40-80% usually but there have been times in the past where everyone filled. The deer hunting here has deteriorated as the elk population exploded. Because of that you won't see many deer but if you do see one it will be very, very respectable. There is no charge to hunt deer at the same time as long as you have a license. As far as packing out a deer it is the same process, free, just get it to where a horse can go.

The first season is a 90 percent draw for "Either Sex" licenses which is a great one to have with the licenses we call, "If it is Brown it is down."

We will try to make this one of the most memorable trips you'll ever have whether it be your southwest Colorado hunting trip or a summer high country pack trip.

ELK HUNTING IN COLORADO IS OUR SPECIALTY

Our hunting camps are at 8,000 - 9,500 feet and are located near Lemon reservoir bordering the beautiful San Juan National Forest and Mountains, 10 miles Northeast of Durango in southwest Colorado. Our hunts include a variety of terrain: deep canyons, dark timber and open meadows, prime locations for southwest Colorado elk or deer hunting, in Colorado hunting areas GMU075 and GMU751.

The kill ratio varies from season to season - trying to predict which season is best is like trying to predict the southwest Colorado weather. Although we cannot guarantee a game kill, our experienced guides will work very hard for you to have a chance to get your game. Whether you are hunting Colorado elk or mule deer we want to make your southwest Colorado hunting experience a great one!

All of our hunts are from our private property making your hunting area much more private, without the pressure of other hunters.

Anyone born after January 1, 1949 must have a valid Hunter Safety Card.

This is a spectacular time of year to be hunting. The days are generally nice, the nights are cool and the only thing breaking the peaceful silence is the sound of Colorado elk bulls bugling. Our Colorado big game hunting camp is accessed only by our private property and is completely set up. All you need to bring will be your sleeping bag and personal gear.

If you want, we can guide you on a one guide per two hunter's basis and do the bugling for you. Our secluded hunting area has plenty of wallowing holes, excellent southwest Colorado elk hunting habitat and a good elk population. Come seek the thrill and excitement as these Rocky Mountain elk bulls challenge you back. In the early weeks of the season before the rut gets going we work the more consist and but less exciting watering holes. Now, it is much easier to pattern the bulls by looking for prior day tracks in the mud around the water hole, usually a spring. As a rule, the prime time for a bull to drink is in the afternoon after he has laid up somewhere in the shade al day digesting the grass that he ate that morning. The warm weather just strengthens that drive to drive to drink then go feed again. Feeding can go well into the night when the air is cool and their heavy warm coat is not a burden. The next day the same pattern.... Patterning.

As the season progresses, watering is not a punctual as the rut becomes the main theme. Bugling and more so cow calling becomes the main theme until the end of September's muzzleloader and archery seasons.

As the October Rifle seasons begin the theme is transitions, from bulls with cows to bulls in bachelor herds. Hunting pressure can put these two back together more so in the October season as depending on the weather the migration begins.

The November Gun season sees the bulls more reluctant to herd up with the cows and calf's as they look of bachelor herd safety. Migration becomes more apparent as the weather, snow and colder temperatures take hold and the migration is in full swing.

During the later season when snow falls remember snow is your friend, even if it is cold. The elements make it more difficult to find grass and the time exposed eating becomes longer. Because of the colder weather their body requires more grass than during the summer which again is to the hunter's advantage. The telltale track they leave wherever they go is extremely good and makes you like a blood hound you can see a hot trail from a cold trail, seeing the trail tells you that you are in the right place. No tracks mean turn your efforts into covering as much ground as possible to find what is now herds and very seldom single animals.
